

The First Lesson About Motherhood

Mother #1: "First lesson I learned as a mother was take multiple outfits wherever you go in the diaper bag."

Mother #2: "That it's not easy."

Mother #3: "It's a hard job. It's very demanding"

Mother #1: "Because, you know, accidents happen."

Mother #3: "You're tired, but you just have to keep going and going and going and putting in all your effort."

Mother #4: "You bring the baby home and you kind of think you know what you're doing but you don't."

Mother #2: "When I first got pregnant I was really excited and I was like I can totally do this."

Mother #4: "Have tons of diaper bags ready have tons of toys ready, just be prepared for anything, because, you're not prepared."

Mother #5: "The first lesson I learned as a mother was that it's not easy."

Mother #6: "I was a stepmother before I was a mother. And someone gave me some very good advice about being a stepmother and that was, ignore a lot."

Mother #2: "It's something that I would never change, obviously, but it is a lot harder than I thought it was going to be."

Mother #6: "I think that that advice works with my own kids as much as with my step kids. Ignore a lot. "

Mother #5: "You're never going to understand what your mother went through to do the things for you that she had to do for you until you're a mother yourself and then you really appreciate it a lot more."
